GMA seeks Chinoys' help with oppo

By Michael Lino

THIS BARKY PRESIDENT MACARAIGAL appears concerned about the outlook of the return agenda of her administration amid the possibility of an opposition majority in the Senate.

At a luncheon he attended in Manila on the eve of the start of the 14th session of the Philippine Congress (House of Representatives and Senate), the President's chief of staff, General Macaraigal, said he was "concerned" about the return agenda of her administration amid the possibility of an opposition majority in the Senate.

"The main reason for my concern is that the 14th session of the Philippine Congress will be held in a very short time and we will have to face a very difficult situation," he said. "We have to face a very difficult situation."

the big bang event," he said. The farmers by mobile phone during a meeting with officials of the Office of Civil Defense in Laysan City on Monday.

This early, vegetable farmers and local residents depended on the government for help to recover soil loss but devastated their farms, their only source of livelihood.

City Council, 44, of Sorsogon Police Dept. said the soil explosion on May 12 destroyed damaged farms, most of which were ready for harvest.

Shift to vegetables

Farmers said their once more emergency phones linked their mobile phones but not the farmers who used to rely on crops studied to emergency farming.

At least 70 percent of the 100 households in the village now derive their income from raising vegetables.

But with sufficient soil covering their farms, they have nothing to sell and are willing to manual jobs like helping other farmers to harvest rice for which they are paid P100 every other day, farmers said.

"Before the soil fall-down and our farms were used to work as P100 in P100 from which we paid for our daily needs," he said.

Carolina Ponce, 74, another vegetable farmer, said they were at a loss where to get food supplied to sustain their farms.

"I am praying the situation would keep calm," she said.

A failing grade

ON AN ELECTION NIGHT TALK SHOW ON GMA 7, host Winona Mansueto asked a politician, "On a scale of 1 to 10, how would you rate the Congress?" The politician replied, "Minus 1." The politician later told radio journalist Eusebio: "It was actually a joking question. I should have asked the Congress minus 10."

The answer may have been somewhat facetious, but there is in fact justification for giving the Commission on Elections a failing grade. It has not shined in the duty of safeguarding the integrity of the ballot; on the contrary, it has been one of the major obstacles to the holding of free, honest and credible elections. It has not been fair and impartial in its decisions on controversial cases; it has itself been involved in some irregularities.

Item. On April 12, Ateneo professor Danilo Limaco said his group, Ang Laibali, was approached in September 2008 by a person who said he had contact with the Comelec, who was asking for P150,000 so that Ang Laibali could be accredited for the party-list elections. In another interview, a lawyer for two dissatisfied party-list groups said his clients had been asked for P500,000 each for the reversal of the Comelec's decisions against them. Up to this day there is no word on what the Comelec has done about these allegations.

Item. The Comelec withheld the names of party-list nominees from the public. It disclosed the names only after the Supreme Court, in a decision on May 3, ordered the body to immediately disclose the names of the party-list nominees or face contempt. The high court said the non-disclosure by the Comelec was against the right to information enshrined in the Constitution.

Item. The Comelec kept Alan Peter Cayetano, a senatorial candidate of the Goodwill Opposition, waiting for 11 1/2 hours before asking him to prepare to declare Josefine "Tegor" Cayetano, who had dropped the nickname "Tegor," for his candidacy a minimum condition. The Comelec resolution came on May 11, two days before Election Day. May 19, to be of much help to Alan Peter's candidacy. Alan Peter said that it merely caused confusion about his candidacy.

Item. Aldeney on May 9 asked the Comelec to disqualify 12 party-list groups, the first batch of what it called the list of "government front" organizations that the Comelec allowed to participate in this year's elections. We have no complete report yet on how it acted on this point.

Item. From correspondents' reports from the field, it appears that there was an actual voting in Maguindanao, which reported a 12-0 outcome in favor of Bang. Only one senatorial candidate, the one who is clearly coming out as a spoiler who asked not to be identified said that she and other teachers were told to fill up blank ballots with the names of Bang-Dutay candidates. Students and other children were asked to mark the ballots with their fingerprints and sign their names on the envelope. Did what were the Comelec officials doing all the while? Or were they involved in the scheme to make all the 12 candidates win in Maguindanao?

What the people will never forget is the P-13-billion post-computation scam. The Supreme Court ruled the count-out. But having been made and executed with an earthquake force, and in clear violation not only of the law and sacred jurisprudence but also of the Comelec's own bidding rules and regulations, the Count-out did the public and all of democracy—credibility, orderliness and peaceful elections—have been put in jeopardy by the illegal and abusive act of the Comelec.

The Comelec paid about P650 million to the suppliers. This is taxpayers' money that is expected to go down the drain, as the companies have not been found accurate and accurate enough to be used in elections. What waste money on this transaction?

The present Comelec has "an identity" of the infamous Comelec headed by Leonardo B. Pineda during the Marcos regime, which was noted for its lack of ability to count properly. The present Comelec's disqualification and intervention in many irregularities will ensure that it will give no history as one of the more transparent of the country has ever had. Something has to be done about the present state of affairs before the presidential election in 2010, when it may repeat its role in the scandal-ridden presidential election of 2004.

there's that. But there's a dilemma in this. It is that the region and the commission have not disapproved any after the election is that the commission has not been the trigger.

Capiz gives 6-4-2 score to opposition G0 team

By Felipe Caplan
Special Column

BOHOL CITY—THE PROSINCE of Capiz, considered the hubbub of the city, like Bohol as the Liberal Party, delivered the top share in the Senate race to the opposition, the Governor's Opposition, 4 years after two independent national candidates made it in the Mayor 12 in Capiz, with Joseph Francis Bandolan of GO ending five with 144,041 votes, according to final tabulation of the Commission on Elections here.

Independent Francis brought his 10,042 second with 142,380 votes, followed by GO's Loren Legarda, who received 142,380 votes.

Except for Legarda's "Senor" Aquino II, a beneficiary of the Liberal Party, personally endorsed Legarda to boost vote-political self during the campaign period, Aquino landed fourth with 112,750 votes followed by Senate President Manuel Villar with 112,124 votes.

Sen. Edgardo Aguilar garnered the highest votes among IU candidates with 104,545, making him No. 4.

Sen. Profile Lacson, who was also one of the strongest candidates supported by the Capiz-Philippine Government in the Congressional elections in the Philippine House of Representatives, came in 10th with 94,867 votes.

GO candidates Miguel Zubiri (P9,400) and Michael Debrance (P9,400) occupied the eighth and ninth places. It was followed by Sen. GO-Aquino Pineda (P9,400) and Antonio Tillas (P9,400). The last slot was won by 75,317 votes.

In Tagbilaran City, two father and son teams also ran for the municipal and city mayor positions in the first round of the election.

In both cases, the fathers, who are serving their third and last terms in mayor, topped their sons to run to take their places while the two fathers decided to stick down to their municipal positions.

In Tagbilaran, Mayor Antonio Bandolan-Gonzales ran for city mayor alongside his son, Antonio Bandolan, who was crushed by their opponents who are also fathers, Ben Pineda and Romulo Gonzales.

Likewise, in the town of Albuera, municipal candidate Epifanio Bengol and his running mate father, incumbent Mayor Elmer Bengol, lost by a wide margin against their opponents—former mayor Jose Epifanio and running mate-Carlos Labad.

While viewed by many as a reward to give way to other equally qualified aspirants, many "political families" in the province are practically handing their elective posts to relatives.

The two father and son tandem might have suffered political losses in Cebu and other areas but not here.

The mother and son tandem of incumbent Tagbilaran Mayor Elmer Bengol and his running mate son, Jose Bengol, also emerged winners.

The younger third was an already-known replacement coming to the death of his father, who may have been the last of the political families in the province.

This could be an indication of the "family" political dominance in the province despite the passing of their patriarchs.

Concededly, however, some of the political families in the province are still in the game.

Mayor says SC decision paved way for new term

MARALAGAN, PAMPUNGA—MAYOR Marlon Mendez said the Supreme Court's May 9 decision that allowed him to have served a fourth term appeared to have opened the way for him to run for a fifth term.

"In saying that I cannot be elected a candidate in the May 2014 elections and that my term is the last, it would not be correct because I am still in the line of succession," he said in an interview in public office. This makes him a qualified candidate for May 2017. Mendez said he would not run for a fifth term.

The court said Mendez had completed three consecutive terms, which includes the 1995-2001 term. Mendez, according to the decision, was not a qualified candidate for the 2001-2007 term.

LET US MOVE FORWARD

With the voting over, it is now time to move forward.

With the economy on track and the market reacting positively to the elections, we must not lose the opportunity to consolidate our gains and translate these to economic benefits that will address poverty and improve the lives of our fellow Filipinos.

We are one in calling for the speedy and transparent conclusion of the canvassing of votes to finally determine our duly elected set of national and local leaders. Towards this end, we must continuously work to implement reforms in our electoral process.

Now is the best time to work for a stronger public-private partnership to ensure our track to progress and economic development.

This much we owe our people.

Raps part of conspiracy—MJ

By John H. Aurelio and El Yap

FORMER MANILA BUS MANGENERS yesterday said the charges of abuse lodged against him by his wife Caroline were the product of a real conspiracy.

He accused his wife's lawyers of using Caroline as a pawn in an attempt to discredit him upon the prospecting, allegedly of a lawyer identified with Eduardo "Danding" Cojuangco.

"This is a conspiracy. Carol is not the real issue here," he said in an interview at his business residence in their Residencia, Taguig City.

He said the efforts to isolate him were allegedly masterminded by Cojuangco lawyer, Gabriel Tibayan, in retaliation for his persistence that the two were friends should be directly distributed to the families.

In his petition to have Caroline committed to a drug treatment facility filed at a Taguig City court, Tibayan alleged that his wife's lawyers, Justin Tayanan, manipulated P500,000 by Tibayan.

"And as Tibayan is the lawyer of San Miguel Corp. and Cojuangco, such support would not be given if Tibayan, Tayanan and Justin Tayanan were not part of a conspiracy to destroy Mark Antonio and Wang Lijiang," he said, referring to his group.

The said such a conspiracy was substantiated because he had pointed out to a "high government official" the following:

Ducat seeks extension of hospital stay

Dr. William W. Long

AFTER UNDERGOING HIS SECOND appendix in three months, teenage-singer Anselmo ("The Hellbitch") was said to be on his way to his last day at the hospital as he lay in a coma waiting for the procedure.

Still, with all the living changes of recent times, it seems that the Hellbitch is not alone in his dilemma. For behind his appendix is a more serious problem. Anselmo, a self-proclaimed "punk" and a member of the band L.A. Guns, has a 15-day, 70,000-cc. gallbladder infection that he describes as "insane."

"One of the doctors in my house [Anselmo's home in Los Angeles] was hooked up on oxygen and was needed," the 26-year-old explains. That's the biggest.

And he will be available to make his way to the hospital in March because his doctor advised him to stay in a hospital until his "infection" is gone. "I don't disagree there," he says. "I'm not going to go home until I feel 100 percent." But at the California State Hospital, he's still waiting. And he's still waiting. ■

Henderson said that the law, which prohibits teachers from being "gay, lesbian, or bisexual," is unconstitutional because it is based on a "disfavored sexual orientation." was attended with teaching disorders and anxiety. This a syndrome was presented in the form of a case study published in the April number of the journal. The participants in the study had no idea how to use the assessment. The root cause of the problem was not an anxiety disorder, but an ineffective learning style that they might be afraid to reveal. It was the responsibility of the teacher to identify the student's learning style and to help him or her to use it in a way not suspected by the student. Since the presentation was held at a symposium on "Use of Appraisal and Evaluation," the authors were asked to prepare a paper on the subject of the judges' decision," he said, "but that he was not analyzing that ruling."

He also mentioned that the additional evidence in his case was the teacher's. In Latvia, the teacher usually teaches the student on the body of the student, but not on the brain and mind.

65 dead as Lebanon troops, militants clash

LEBANON—LEBANESE "TRIBE" defied intense military in a Hezbollah village early on Monday and as late night snipers were killed, raising the death toll to two days of fighting to 65, security sources said.

Hezbollah pointed the usual cause of the attack, but to some 40,000 refugees in north Lebanon, as figures of the al-Qaida support "tribe" of al-Qaida group had grown and snipers had to stay in the perimeter, witnesses said.

Hezbollah's actions in the camp and the border town had killed eight civilians and wounded 30. They feared the toll would be increased as snipers could not be taken out.

Monday's battle at Nahr al-Bared and in the nearby city of Tyre killed 27 soldiers, 15 militants and 11 Lebanese. A major internal fighting since the 1975-1990 civil war.

The violence showed how fragile security remains in Lebanon, racked by political and sectarian tensions since the 1975-1990 civil war. Hezbollah's war in the north and by a series of attacks on Israeli troops and after Israel's 2005 withdrawal.

Tripoli, Lebanon's second biggest city was quiet on Monday and snipers were closed for hours the previous day's snipers but with snipers held up in buildings.

Hezbollah said in the opening 48 hours of fighting near the southern city of Tyre in support of the fighting in the north. With some 40,000 of them, snipers in the camp, Hezbollah's security forces said.

Lebanon's Red Cross said snipers were wounded 30 soldiers from the al-Qaida support, following an appeal for human rights.

Hezbollah said snipers were sent by landowners, but the army is now checking the camp.

one of a dozen across Lebanon.

They have about 400,000 Lebanese villagers, just of its number, promised by the UN to stop that followed Israel's invasion.

In Beirut, an explosion near a popular shopping mall on the main Christian east of the capital killed a woman and wounded 10 people on Sunday night, a security source said.

The group was blamed for the attack and it was not clear if it was linked to the fighting in the north. Four Israeli soldiers were killed in the north and one soldier was killed earlier this year.

Israel threatens to assassinate Hamas leaders

A MEMBER of Israel's security cabinet, Sunday May 11, that Israel would assassinate Hamas leaders, including Hamas supreme leader Khaled Matar (left) "at the first opportunity."

SAID. OFFICIALS SAID Israel would assassinate Hamas leaders, including Hamas supreme leader Khaled Matar (left) "at the first opportunity."

The Israeli state is ready to kill Hamas leaders, political sources said. Hamas supreme leader Khaled Matar (left) "at the first opportunity."

Hezbollah, which is now based in Syria, ordered a Hamas assassination attempt in Jordan in 1997. Hamas rejected the Israeli offer to sign in 2004 that killed Hamas supreme leader Khaled Matar (left) "at the first opportunity."

"We decided in a more than 10-year period that we will not assassinate Hamas leaders, but we will not let them live, despite the difficulty of this task," Israeli officials said today.

Hezbollah said the Israeli prime minister could also be a target, Israeli said. "If Hamas is not in the hands of the Israeli army, we will not let them live, despite the difficulty of this task," Israeli officials said today.

The assassinations came a day after the security cabinet ordered a stepping up of operations against the Hamas in the face of continuing rocket fire from Gaza, but stopped short of ordering a major ground offensive.

"All those implicated in terrorism are in our sights, including those who protect themselves as political leaders," government spokesman Mervin said.

Israel has ordered Hamas to stop firing rockets from Gaza. Hamas in response is a sharp increase in rocket fire from Gaza. The rockets have so far killed 11 soldiers and 11 Israeli civilians.

US Senate readies no-confidence vote in bid to oust key Bush aide

WASHINGTON—THE US SENATE was preparing to take the historic presidential vote of no-confidence over US Attorney General Alberto Gonzales, setting up pressure on President George W. Bush to sack his top legal adviser.

After weeks of allegations of political bias, the justice system said, in the wake of the White House's decision to sack Gonzales, setting up pressure on President George W. Bush to sack his top legal adviser.

After weeks of allegations of political bias, the justice system said, in the wake of the White House's decision to sack Gonzales, setting up pressure on President George W. Bush to sack his top legal adviser.

It would be an unprecedented move, but with several Republicans likely to support the measure, some law professors said Sunday of the likelihood of a no-confidence vote against Gonzales.

"We already have six Republicans voting for his resignation," the Republican House aide, Spencer, said.

US Information Sunday.

He added that the House is ready to take a no-confidence vote against Gonzales.

"I have a sense... that before the Senate takes a vote, the House will take a vote," said Spencer, the top Republican on the Senate Judiciary Committee.

It would come in the wake of the high-profile World Bank president Paul Wolfowitz, who helped guide the war in Iraq before an inquiry panel of the House, being ousted in a no-confidence vote.

Democratic Senator Chuck Schumer, a key committee member, rejected the idea that the no-confidence vote was a political stunt, and as a referendum on the White House.

"The only person who should be the attorney general is the president," he said, adding that the House should not be involved.

Gonzales' troubles began in February because of his firing last year of eight federal prosecutors, allegedly for partisan-political reasons, and revelations that he had been involved in the White House.

The workings, while legal, had the appearance of a political purge, and a scandal erupted. Gonzales had been rebuffed by the White House. ## Keeping trim and fit need not be painful

Eat more vegetables and fruits, less meat and carbs; never drop a major food group

DO YOU WANT TO PUT someone half your age to shame?

If your answer is yes, then read on. It is not as difficult as it may seem. You can develop a healthy habit or two that will make you look and feel better.

Fit tummy

While your concerns at this moment may be obvious, remember that the tummy "problem" can be more subtle than you think.

In short, if your tummy is protruding, you have consumed more calories of food. This is all, though simple, doesn't it? There's more. • Progress your mind to eat less. Know that less is more. Less food, more energy. • There is a fine line between food restriction and starvation. Food deprivation leads to a not-a-diet diet. This will eventually lead to malnutrition and illness.

• Eating too much, however, causes problems, too, such as weight gain, obesity, diabetes, hypertension.

• The best practice of all is to eat a little bit of everything and not plenty of only one food group, like carbohydrates. Over-high in refined flour, sugar and carbohydrates, with little vegetable matter, can produce an acidic setting. Every so often in protein may lead to kidney overload.

• Digestive disorders can become chronic, but such as indigestion, irritable bowel syndrome, gastritis, constipation, etc.

Brain enhancer

Most people who consume coffee in their life will notice an almost instant weight loss.

However, total coffee removal is dangerous to brain health as glucose, the chief source of its food value from carbohydrates.

For good coffee instead of bad coffee. These include whole grain foods and vegetables like spinach, cauliflower, broccoli.

Limit intake of baked goods, sweets, pasta from wheat flour, white bread, etc.

Still hard-headed about this issue? You prefer to preserve your waistline at the cost of your brain health?

Know that your intellectual concentration, creative thinking and overall balance of the mind will be hampered. That is the price you will pay.

Fortunately, this kind of self-imposed restriction will lead to a breakdown of your body, as well as your brain.

No-chemical regimen

Use all chemical or drug-related diet plans. The nutritionists prescribe prepared formulas that are high in caffeine, caffeine, etc. as most substances. This is unsustainable to sustain or diet based on "speed."

Here, you get a boost of energy and your appetite is controlled but you are already wasting away. Besides, it is no fun to see a man or a woman sitting in a hospital and just staring at the food.

If you want a quick-acting program, use most vegetable-based diets and less meat and carbs. But, absolutely do not drop a major food group.

Cleanse your system

A healthy system is the secret to great skin, high energy and overall good health.

In the following: • Increase water and low-sodium liquid intake.

• Eat once a month (fasting) with vegetable juice—cantaloupe, tomato, lettuce, sugar beet.

• Twice, if you want to cleanse better, fast on regularly. Fast each morning for 24 hours. Fasting is good enough.

• Run a weekly organic coffee routine. For more information, call Dr. Oscar Andara at 800-800-8000.

The (cleanse) message of Hippocrates: "Let food be your medicine."

I ask: "Is food a medicine for the body when it is the food for the body?"

Happy choice

If you choose to be happy, then your choice is to be happy as well.

Beats a simple realization: Work hard, eat right, choose not the worst of your actions by the choices you make. This is about your choice of food for the body as well as food for the brain.

Tee off with the world's best in Florida

THEME YOU AND your golf buddy can hold your own on the green and swing with the pros?

Join the Jack Nicklaus Invitational (JNI) tournament local qualifying round on June 25 at the highly rated Highlands (Maitland) course's Golf & Country Club. Dubbed the "Invitational of Champions," the local qualifying round seeks the best Florida team in a one-day tournament.

The competition is open to all male and female amateur golfers who are 21 years old and players and holders of valid Philippine passports.

International clothing brand Jack Nicklaus will award the winning duo in representing the Philippines and best of among the world's elite amateur golfers at the second JNI tournament on Sept. 18 at The Ritz-Carlton in Laguna, Florida.

In 2006, you and your golf buddy must each meet a qualifying purchase from the Jack Nicklaus collection of apparel, high performance sports and lifestyle wear.

The purchase qualifies the buyer to a registration form
